No trouble was experienced with the rocket component in either instance. The second test firing of the S-II-T stage, first fired for

Extensive research and development work was undertaken during this Friday countdown that assisted, in part, to the perfect countdown achieved

Unperturbed by the forced shur-downs engineers again said that this was exactly the purpose for which the S-II-T stage was chipped into MTF. Their first full flight S-II component will be brought to the facility when all bugs discovered by the test model have been

Apportionment . . . county boardo

The one-man, one-vote principle is morching forward, and now it has reached boards of county commissioners in South Dakota. The supreme court of that state has held the principle applicable to county commissioners and has ruled that the apportionment of the commissioners of Minnehaha County violates it.

There was no doubt about the numerical malapportionment. In a county of 85,575 population, two of the five commissioners were elected in districts in Sioux Falls, which has a population of 65,466, while three were elected from the remainder of the county. The trial court found that the inequality of districts and the disproportionate representation denied the county's electors equal protection of the law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution and of three sections of the state constitu-

The count noted several cases in which the one-man, one-vote standard has been applied to bodies other than state legislatures: to the City Council of Baltimore in Ellis v. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, 234 F. Supp. 945 (D. Md. 1966); to a New York county board of supervisors in Bianchi v. Griffing, 238 F. Supp. 997 (E. D. N. Y. 1965); to a Wisconsin board of county commissioners in Wisconsin ex rel. Sonnenborn v. Sylvester, 132 N.W. 2d 249 (Wis. 1965); and to the Common Council of Binghamton, New York in Seaman v. Fedourich, 200 N.E. 2d 778 (N.Y. 1965).

There are exceptions, but as a general proposition, most youngtters seem to reed today out of duty, not for pleasure. They turn up in libraries, ordinarily at the last possible moment, to work up a term paper; they manage to digest a few titles on "antigned manage to digect a few titles on "anotymed outside reading." But reading for fun? Reading for pure delight? Such reading has gone with the winds of mumblery-peg, marbles, and tacks.

Out of their own observation, many parents may confirm this impression. What did we read when we were growing up-those of us now in our forcieo? Why, sir, we read everything that could be fetched home from the Carnegle Library. We started out at 5 or 6 on the Bobbsey Twins, and we gobbled up the other 'twins' books-The Eakimo Twing, the Durch Twing, and all the other twins. Every Christmas we swallowed another Oz book. The boyo moved on to Tom Swift and Tarzan. The girls were deep in the Little Colonel stories, in Miss Minerva, in the Five Little Peppers, in Bunny Brown and Ruth Fielding and Polly what's-her-

These were the peanut butter and jelly kind of books, mere snacks, filling but not wholly sociofying. The first real book i remember reading was Ivanhoe, and I must have read it 50 times. But there were others-The Three Muchesteers, and the Count of Monte Cristo, Black Arrow, Robinson Crusoe, The Swios Family Robincon, Treasure Island, the Boy's King Arthur, Beau Geste, Tale of Two Cities. These were the curl-up-onrainy-afternoon books.

A little later came Poe and Hawthorne, and more Dickens and more Stevenson; Jane Armen, and the Browner, and Malville, Maby Dick! For blocks around we scound the case, searching every garden for the great white whale. There was Richard Harding Davie, and Richard Hall Curton, Owen Willer, Zeno Groy, O. Henry. We flew a maries, purcuing Richardon in a spatiering Spadi-Ack-orb-orb-ork . Any number of explanations comes to mind. One of them is hopeful: Most of the really fine books are now to which availchie in preparbacited editions that children do not need to exarch for them ex libraries; perhaps they read at home more vilably than we know. But most of the other carplanations are pensimistic: Televicton is ceen as the principal Minotour, feeding incorricbly on young minds. As circles and suburbs grow, children have more children to play with, and fewer opportunities for the luxury of reading alone. The achaola are more demanding in homework accignments. but also, these assignments include fewer book reports each year. Poetry has gone out of ciyle, and little memory work to demanded. Life moves too fast; and it passes by the cedemary child.

To be sure, there is much evidence that the picture changes at the college level. where abruptly the English majoro are up to their ears in deep stuff, but it is disquieting, all the same, to notice how often they miss easy literary allustons and familiar quotations. They are fine on the great and monumental works, and they climb nimbly over the mountains of Kafka and Mann and Stendhal; they can explicate Faulkner, and translate Salinger from the original italics, and plough blandly through the much of James Baldwin and the blue-clay prose of Ayn Rand.

But comewhere along the line many of college senior missed the Scarlet Pimpernel; they missed Scaramouche, and Cortland Van Bibber, and Mowgli, and Black Beauty. Our 12-year-olds are missing them now. Yet it is furile to protest that they don't know what fun they are missing; they are hawking the tube on Saturday afternoons, watching the roller derby and earing an orange, and will not be disturbed by the wellmeant remonstrances of middle age.

for 4 schools Children in the grammar grades of four local schools heard special concerts presented Monday by the New Orleans chapter of Young Audiences, Inc. Performances were given during the morning to about 250 pupils at Valena C. Jones and 250 at St. Rose de Lima and in the afternoon at Kiln to a combined audience of about 300 from Hancock North Central and Annunciation schools. The free concerts, designed especially for young children, are a part of a nation-wide offort to make chamber music more available and meaningful to this age group. Mrs. E.C. Samuel is local chairman.

In addition to listening to the music, the young audiences learn about the compositions, the composers and the instrumems which are used. The movement is partially endowed by the Ford Foundation and the local concerts were sponsorred by the Hancock Bank and Insurance Agency, Coast Area Concerts, Inc., and anonymous firland of Hancock County chil-
